WAIKIKI.

Written for the HAWAHAN GAZEITE by E. ELLSWORTH CARRY

The snowy sail flits lightly by, The fleecy clouds as lightly fly, And paint their glories on the sky On the shores of Waikiki. The listless sea-bird dips its wing,

The listless buoys faintly ring, And listless, too, my song I sing, On the shores of Waikiki. Here darkly frowns grim Diamond Head Here sinks the sun in tinted red, And stars peep out when day has fled,

On the shores of Waikiki. The jasper sea in blue and gold, The dreamy beach embraces bold, And thoughts arise that ne'er are told, On the shores of Waikiki.

Here scented breezes ever blow, And murm'ring tides in azure flow, On the shores of Waikiki. Elysian moonlight of our dreams, Here bathes the scene with fairy beams,

Here moonlit waters gleam and glow.

And every leaf in silver gleams, On the shores of Waikiki. Here Summer folds her fleecy wings, Here Beauty all her treasure brings, Here Peace her glory ever sings,

On the shores of Waikiki. COURT CALENDAR.

The whistle at the artesian well at Waikiki was heard tooting gaily at mtervals, Saturday, from 11 A. M. until 5 P M. The well began to flow at the hour first named, and the flow increased during the afternoon until a very fine stream was obtained. The well is teninch, and the flow is at least 1,000,000 gallons per day. The water is somewhat brackish at present (the well being not more than a hundred feet from the sea), although the ten-inch pipe is surrounded by another iron pipe, and the space between filled in with cement, which prevents largely seepage of salt water. The strata through which this new well goes, is almost precisely similar to those through which the King's well passes, about a thousand feet mauka, but the bed rock is reached at about 803 feet, or about 70 feet lower than at that well. The well is to be bored deeper, and Mr. McCandless thinks the water will become sweeter, as that was the case with the King's well, which ran bracki hat first.

Throughout France gardening is practically taught in the primary schools. There are
